CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

In this chapter consists of background of study, research question, objective of the research, scope and limitation of the research, significance of the study, and definition of key term.

A. Background of Study

Speaking becomes one of several skills in English. Speaking skill becomes the most significant thing to be mastered by the learners. In this new era, English speaking skill is needed to compete in life. Speaking skill becomes the first goal with several reasons of study, it becomes personal satisfaction to be able to speak and also gain other interest.¹ People will be labeled to be successful in learning speaking if they are able to speak and spell it well. Speaking is an essential tool to communicate with others. It becomes crucial part of language learning process. Therefore speaking proficiency has received the greatest attention from the learners and lectures.²

Speaking skills are an essential aspect of learning a foreign language. However, many foreign language learners encounter various problems and difficulties in acquiring effective speaking skills. A profound understanding of these issues is crucial in designing appropriate learning strategies to improve speaking skills among foreign language learners. Several previous studies have identified common problems faced by learners in learning speaking skills. Firstly, pronunciation issues often pose a significant challenge. Each language has unique sounds and phonetic rules that may be unfamiliar to learners. Consequently, learners often struggle with pronouncing words correctly and understanding the appropriate intonation. Consequently, learners are trying hard to have good speaking skill. Several strategies are applied to achieve speaking skill including how to set up appropriate curriculum to support the development of communication in foreign language³

Curriculum is a set of plans and arrangements regarding objectives, content, and learning materials as well as the methods used as guidelines for organizing learning activities to achieve higher education goals. Freedom of learning in independent learning is an effort to give freedom and autonomy to educational institutions, and freedom from bureaucratization, lecturers are free from convoluted bureaucracy and students are given the freedom to choose the fields they like.

In the Merdeka Curriculum, speaking ability is considered an important communication skill and must be actively developed. This curriculum emphasizes the importance of students being able to express themselves effectively in English and other languages, according to the development of their abilities.

In the context of the Independent Curriculum, the development of speaking skills is expected through various communicative activities that involve students actively in verbal interaction. These activities can include group discussions, role simulations, presentations, debates, and so on. Teachers are encouraged to create a supportive learning environment, where students feel comfortable speaking and are given sufficient opportunities to practice and develop their speaking skills.

The ability to speak is not only seen as an important aspect of verbal communication, but also as a tool for expressing thoughts, ideas and emotions. Therefore, in the Merdeka Curriculum, speaking learning does not only focus on technical aspects of language (such as pronunciation and grammar), but also on students' ability to convey ideas clearly, logically and creatively.

³ Asnur, M.N.A. (2018). Exploring students' learning strategies in speaking performance. International journal of language education, 2 (1).

The learning approach used in the Merdeka Curriculum encourages students to be active in the learning process, build confidence in speaking, and improve their communication skills through relevant and meaningful practical experiences.⁴

The Merdeka Curriculum is a new approach to education in Indonesia which was introduced in 2020. The following are some of the differences between the Merdeka Curriculum and the previous curriculum:

- Flexibility in Learning: The Merdeka Curriculum emphasizes flexibility in learning. Teachers have greater freedom to adapt teaching methods and learning materials according to students' needs and interests. This is different from the previous curriculum which may be more rigid and structured.
- Project-Based Learning: Merdeka Curriculum encourages project-based learning, where students learn through real-world problem solving, collaborative projects, and independent exploration. This approach aims to increase student engagement and develop critical and creative thinking skills.
- The Importance of Digital Literacy and 21st Century Skills: The Merdeka Curriculum recognizes the importance of digital literacy and 21st century skills in facing future challenges. Therefore, this curriculum pays more attention to the development of skills such as problem solving, collaboration, communication and critical thinking, as well as the integration of technology in learning.
- Multidisciplinary Approach: The Merdeka Curriculum encourages a multidisciplinary approach to learning, where concepts and skills from various fields of study can be integrated. It aims to help students make connections between various topics and understand the wider context.
- Teacher and School Empowerment: The Merdeka Curriculum provides more empowerment to teachers and schools in designing and implementing learning. Teachers are expected to be learning facilitators who inspire and support students in exploring their interests and talents.
- Competency-Based Assessment: The Merdeka Curriculum emphasizes competency-based assessment, where students are assessed based on their attainment of skills and understanding. This assessment covers various aspects such as knowledge, skills, attitudes and values.

These differences show that the Merdeka Curriculum aims to renew the educational approach with a focus on learning that is more student-centered, relevant to current needs, and developing the skills needed to face future challenges.

⁴ Department of Education and Culture (Merdeka Curriculum: Competency Based Learning Guidelines. Jakarta: Ministry of Education and Culture)

The following are examples of problems in English speaking skills that may be encountered during classroom observations with the implementation of the Merdeka Curriculum:

Vocabulary Limitations: Students may have difficulty expressing ideas or opinions due to limitations in their English vocabulary. This can occur due to lack of exposure to various words in real situations or limited resources that support vocabulary learning.

Inability to Organize Thoughts: Some students may have difficulty organizing and organizing their ideas in a structured manner while speaking. They may be confused about starting a conversation, constructing an argument, or connecting ideas logically.

Lack of Self-Confidence: Limited self-confidence can be a barrier for some students in expressing themselves in English in front of classmates or teachers. This can be caused by fear of making mistakes or fear of being evaluated by others.

Lack of Speaking Practice: Students may have fairly good passive skills in understanding English through reading and listening, but lack opportunities to practice speaking actively in real communication contexts. This can happen due to lack of time in the curriculum or lack of opportunities to practice speaking outside of class.

Differences in Speaking Habits: Students who are used to a particular dialect or accent may have difficulty communicating clearly and being understood by others who are not used to that accent. This may affect their communication skills in future academic or professional situations.

It is important for educators to identify these problems and design appropriate learning strategies to help students overcome challenges in speaking English. This can be done through learning that is oriented towards speaking activities, expanding vocabulary, building self-confidence, providing constructive feedback, and providing sufficient speaking practice opportunities.

From the explanation above it is clear that the recovery of the education system from the learning crisis cannot be realized through curriculum changes alone. Various efforts are also needed to strengthen the capacity of teachers and school principals, assistance for local governments, structuring evaluation systems, as well as more equitable infrastructure and funding. But the curriculum also has an important role. The curriculum has a major influence on what teachers teach, as well as how the material is taught. Therefore, a well-designed curriculum will encourage and facilitate teachers to teach better.⁵

Furthermore, the problem also encounter in MAN Rejang Lebong as the school that implement the Merdeka Curriculum. Based on pre-observation many English students have problem in learning speaking in the Merdeka curriculum. Based on interview with some students in MAN Rejang Lebong, they said that they have limited exposure to structured speaking tasks or opportunities for guided practice, impacting their speaking skill development since Merdeka Curriculum asks the student-centered nature of the Merdeka Curriculum. It may result in a reduced emphasis on teacher-led instruction and traditional speaking activities. Second, The Merdeka Curriculum's emphasis on student autonomy and active participation can create an environment that places a high demand on learners to express their thoughts and opinions. Some learners may lack confidence in speaking, leading to self-consciousness, anxiety, and reluctance to engage in oral communication activities.

It is important for schools and writers at MAN Rejang Lebong to design appropriate learning strategies to help students overcome challenges in learning English speaking skills. Additional support in the form of extracurricular activities, structured speaking practice sessions, and the integration of technology in learning can help strengthen students' abilities in this regard. Apart from that, efforts to build students' self-confidence and motivation in learning English also need to be considered to achieve optimal results in implementing the Merdeka Curriculum. Based on the problem, writers try to investigate student's problems in learning speaking skill in Merdeka curriculum implementation at MAN Rejang Lebong.

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW

This chapter describes related theory of speaking skill, theory of Merdeka curriculum, problem of learning speaking in Merdeka curriculum implementation, problem solving and review of related study.

A. Review of Related Theories

1. Speaking Skill

In this case, the researcher explains the concept of speaking. To make it clearer, the explanation is divided into four points: 1) the definition of speaking, 2) characteristic of speaking.

a. The Definition of Speaking

According to Brown defined speaking is an interactive process of making meaning that includes producing, receiving, and processing information. It is an interaction process that happen between a speaker and a listener. Speaking is called as productive skill because the process involves the speaker who sends information or ideas to other people. When people share information to others, it is called as speaking. it can be sharing idea or information that is talked to other people. Producing several statements to be spoken and receiving the information or idea that is delivered.¹⁰

According to Mazouzi stated that speaking is an interactive process to construct meaning that involves producing information, receiving information and processing information. From the statements mentioned above, it can be concluded that speaking is a process that involves delivering information or idea stated from the speaker to the listeners. Delivering

¹⁰ Brown, H.D. (1994). Teaching by principles: An interactive to language pedagogy. San fransisco: Addison Wesley longman information involves interaction between speaker and listener. Speaking process is always be there in daily life. It becomes the connection among people to have interaction.¹¹

b. The Characteristic of Speaking

According to Mazouzi stated that fluency is the first characteristic of speaking. Fluency becomes the most important characteristic in speaking performance. Also, in teaching speaking skill sets fluency to be the main goal. Speak English fluently appears professional vibes, when people are able to speak English fluently means that people are judged as professional speaker. Then, Accuracy is the second characteristic of speaking performance¹². Furthermore, lectures should maintain accuracy in their speaking to teach in class. Learners are also required to pay attention to the accuracy in speaking. To reach accuracy of vocabulary is selecting suitable words in the suitable contexts of the sentence. So learners must be able to speak English by using words and expressions perfectly and correctly. The third characteristic is Grammar. Speak English with proper sentence arrangement with correct grammar makes the listener easy to understand what he or she said. In contrast when people speak with incorrect sentence arrangement will make listeners hard to understand. The forth is vocabulary. Having good speaking skill needs mastery of vocabulary. Speaker can not say anything to have speaking process without having vocabulary. The fifth is Pronunciation. Having speaking skill must be supported with the mastery of pronunciation. It makes our speaking becomes perfect. Moreover, Pronunciation makes speakers can speak English language accurately.

¹² Mazouzi, S. (2013). Teaching English. London: Lucy Pollard Publisher.

2. Merdeka Curriculum

The Merdeka Curriculum is an innovative educational framework that aims to empower students by fostering independence, critical thinking, and creativity. Built upon the principles of self-directed learning and holistic development, it equips students with the necessary skills and knowledge to thrive in an ever-changing world.

At the heart of the Merdeka Curriculum lies the theory of learner autonomy. This theory posits that learners are active agents in their education, capable of setting goals, making decisions, and taking responsibility for their learning journey. By promoting learner autonomy, the curriculum encourages students to become self-directed learners who actively engage with their education, take ownership of their learning process, and develop a sense of agency.

The Merdeka Curriculum goes beyond traditional subject-centered education by emphasizing interdisciplinary learning and real-world application. It encourages students to explore various fields of knowledge and connect them in meaningful ways. By integrating subjects and incorporating hands-on projects, problem-solving activities, and collaborative work, the curriculum enables students to develop a deep understanding of concepts and their practical applications.

Another key aspect of the Merdeka Curriculum is its focus on critical thinking and creativity. Students are encouraged to analyze information critically, evaluate multiple perspectives, and develop their own informed opinions. They are also provided with opportunities to think creatively, explore innovative solutions, and express their ideas in diverse ways. By nurturing these skills, the curriculum prepares students to tackle complex challenges and contribute to society as active and engaged citizens.

Furthermore, the Merdeka Curriculum recognizes the importance of holistic development. It acknowledges that education should not only focus on academic achievement but also on the social, emotional, and physical well-being of students. The curriculum promotes the development of essential life skills such as communication, collaboration, resilience, and empathy. It also encourages the cultivation of a strong sense of identity, cultural awareness, and ethical values.

Overall, the Merdeka Curriculum provides a comprehensive educational experience that empowers students to become lifelong learners, critical thinkers, and well-rounded individuals. By embracing learner autonomy, interdisciplinary learning, critical thinking, and holistic development, this curriculum paves the way for students to flourish in a rapidly evolving world and contribute meaningfully to society.¹³

3. English Speaking in The Merdeka Curriculum

Learning speaking in the Merdeka Curriculum can be designed by considering approaches that align with the goals of the curriculum, which emphasize student-centered learning, critical thinking skills, and the development of 21st-century skills. Here are some approaches and strategies that can be used in speaking learning within the Merdeka Curriculum:

- a. Project-Based Learning: In speaking learning, students can be given projects that require them to collaborate, communicate, and present their work orally.

¹³ Rahayu, R., Rosita, R., Rahayuningsih, Y. S., Hernawan, A. H., & Prihantini, P. (2022). Implementasi Kurikulum Merdeka Belajar di Sekolah Penggerak

These projects can involve real-life situations or simulations to train students in speaking and effectively conveying their ideas.

- b. Discussions and Debates: Designing discussion and debate activities that encourage students to speak and express their opinions actively. Teachers can provide interesting topics relevant to students' lives and facilitate small group discussions or whole-class discussions. This can help students enhance their speaking abilities, articulate their opinions, and respond to arguments effectively.
- c. Simulations and Role-Playing: Using simulations or role-playing in speaking learning can help students practice language in authentic contexts and interact actively. For example, students can play roles as characters in specific communicative situations, such as being a seller and buyer, a visitor and an information officer, or team members in a particular scenario.
- d. Presentations and Speeches: Encouraging students to create presentations and speeches can help them develop formal speaking skills. Teachers can provide guidance and training on effective presentation techniques, language usage, and persuasive delivery. Providing opportunities for students to practice presentations and speeches in front of the class can help improve their confidence and speaking abilities.
- e. Technology-Enhanced Activities: Leveraging technology in speaking learning can involve the use of applications or software specifically designed to train speaking skills. For instance, mobile apps or online learning platforms that provide voice recordings, interactions with native speakers, or various speaking activities tailored to students' proficiency levels.

f. Peer Feedback and Evaluation: Encouraging students to provide feedback to each other in speaking learning can help them improve and enhance their speaking abilities. Teachers can teach students clear evaluation criteria and provide guidelines for students to give constructive feedback.¹⁴

4. Problem in learning speaking in Merdeka Curriculum Implementation

Speaking skill is a communication ability that expresses an idea. Learning speaking conducts the students to speak well in correct language.¹⁵ There are several studies that show the difficulties in mastering speaking skill. Speaking skill is not easy to be mastered. It involves students' interaction. Students' interaction is useful to develop students' speaking skill. Furthermore, Students' interaction can be more effective to improve students' speaking skill if it is done in the classroom. It is proven by Saeed, Khaksari, Eng, & Ghani. Moreover, speaking skill must be done in fun way in order to avoid students' anxiety in learning speaking. According to Horwitz the most number of problems that students faced is about an anxiety in learning speaking. Anxiety is the human subjective feeling of tension, apprehension, nervousness, and worry related with an arousal of the autonomic nervous system. Foreign language anxiety is a distinct complex of self-perceptions, beliefs, feelings, and behaviors related to classroom learning arising from the unique language of the learning process. Horwitz had identified three categories of problem relate to learning speaking they are Communication apprehension, test anxiety and fear of negative evaluation.

Generally, there are several problem faced by students in speaking. Here, the researcher connects the theory to the implementation of Merdeka Curriculum by

a. Limited Speaking Opportunities:

The student-centered approach of the Merdeka Curriculum may result in limited opportunities for students to engage in meaningful speaking activities. Without sufficient speaking practice, students may struggle to improve their oral communication skills.

b. Insufficient Vocabulary and Grammar Knowledge:

Developing speaking skills requires a solid foundation of vocabulary and grammar. Some students in the Merdeka Curriculum may face challenges in acquiring an adequate range of vocabulary and understanding grammar rules. This can impede their ability to express themselves accurately and fluently in spoken language.

c. Pronunciation and Intonation Difficulties:

Achieving correct pronunciation and intonation is crucial for effective communication. However, students may encounter difficulties in acquiring the sounds and intonation patterns of the target language. Without proper guidance and practice, they may struggle to pronounce words accurately and convey meaning effectively.

d. Limited Speaking Confidence:

¹⁶ H. Douglas Brown, Language Assessment Principle and Classroom Practices, San Francisco: Longman. 2003, p.157.

The emphasis on critical thinking and problem-solving in the Merdeka Curriculum may inadvertently lead to a lack of speaking confidence among students. Some students may feel hesitant or self-conscious when speaking in front of their peers or participating in oral activities. Overcoming this lack of confidence is essential for the development of speaking skills.

e. Lack of Speaking Assessment and Feedback:

The holistic assessment approach of the Merdeka Curriculum may not provide adequate feedback and evaluation specifically focused on speaking skills. Without targeted assessment and constructive feedback, students may find it challenging to identify their strengths and weaknesses in speaking. This can hinder their progress in improving their oral communication abilities.

f. Technological Challenges:

The integration of technology in the Merdeka Curriculum can present both opportunities and challenges for students in speaking learning. Technical issues or limited access to technology resources may hinder students' engagement in online speaking activities or language-learning platforms that utilize technology for speaking practice.

g. Limited Exposure to Authentic Spoken Language:

Authentic exposure to the target language is crucial for developing speaking skills. However, students in the Merdeka Curriculum may have limited access to authentic spoken language, particularly if their exposure is primarily through classroom interactions or limited resources. Insufficient exposure to authentic language can affect students' ability to understand and produce natural, contextually appropriate speech.

Addressing these problems requires tailored interventions and strategies within the Merdeka Curriculum. Providing ample speaking opportunities, integrating explicit instruction on vocabulary and grammar, incorporating pronunciation and intonation practice, fostering speaking confidence through supportive environments, implementing specific speaking assessments, and maximizing authentic language exposure can help overcome the challenges faced by students in speaking within the Merdeka Curriculum.

5. Strategy to overcome Problem encountered by the Speaking learners in Merdeka Curriculum

Problem solving is an effort to solve the problem that learners face in any condition to be better than before. Such as, the students got the problem in the English lesson because students need to speak English fluently and confidently. Based on this case, a teacher must be able to find out the proper way to solve the students' problem of how to make them speak fluently. There are several ways to make students get more interested and motivated to solve their problems. The first way is creating the situation that excites the pupil, stimulate the students' experiences the impulse or force them to find out the problem solving. The teacher must lead the students to be more experienced and active. According to Horwitz, To overcome students problem in learning speaking can be done in two categories way.¹⁷ The first, they can help them learn to cope with existing anxiety provoking situation. The second, they can make the learning context less stressful.

Extremely anxious students are highly motivated to avoid engaging in the classroom activities they fear most, they may appear simply unprepared or indifferent. Therefore, teachers should always consider the possibility that anxiety is responsible for the student behavior discussed here before attributing poor student performance to lack of ability, inadequate background, or poor motivation. Specific techniques which teachers may use to allay students' anxiety include relaxation exercises, advice on effective language learning strategies, behavioral contracting, and journal keeping. But language teachers have neither sufficient time nor adequate expertise to deal with severe anxiety reactions. Such students, when identified, should probably be referred for specialized help to outside counselors or learning specialists. Reducing stress by changing the context of foreign language learning is the more important and considerably more difficult task. As long as foreign language learning takes place in a formal education setting where evaluation is inextricably tied to performance, anxiety is likely to continue to flourish. Teachers might create student support systems and closely monitor the classroom climate to identify specific sources of student anxiety. As students appear to be acutely sensitive to target language corrections, the selection of error correction techniques should be based on instructional philosophy and on reducing defensive reactions in students. The impact of these (or any) corrective practices on foreign language anxiety and ultimate foreign language achievement must, of course, be studied in the classroom. How much current teaching practices contribute to foreign language anxiety and how much is due to the intrinsic nature of language learning are important issues to be addressed before firm conclusions regarding optimal interventions can be reached.

There are several strategies can be used to overcome problem faced by Speaking Leaner proposed by Nunan, D. The researcher connect the theory to the implementation of Merdeka Curriculum by guided book from Ministry of Education.¹⁸

1. Increase Speaking Opportunities: Provide ample opportunities for students to engage in meaningful speaking activities. This can include pair work, group discussions, presentations, role-plays, debates, and simulations. Encourage active participation and create a supportive and inclusive learning environment where students feel comfortable expressing themselves orally.
2. Scaffolded Instruction: Provide clear and structured guidance to support students in developing their speaking skills. Break down speaking tasks into manageable steps, provide models and examples, and offer language support as needed. Gradually increase the complexity of speaking tasks to challenge students and help them progress.
3. Explicit Instruction on Vocabulary and Grammar: Integrate explicit instruction on vocabulary and grammar relevant to speaking tasks. Teach students vocabulary related to common speaking topics and provide guidance on using grammatical structures effectively in spoken language. Incorporate vocabulary and grammar practice within speaking activities.
4. Pronunciation and Intonation Practice: Include dedicated practice activities for pronunciation and intonation. Teach students the sounds and intonation patterns of the target language and provide opportunities for them to practice and receive feedback. Incorporate activities such as tongue twisters, minimal pair exercises, and recordings of native speakers for imitation and practice.
5. Peer Feedback and Collaboration: Encourage peer feedback and collaboration in speaking activities. Pair students or create small groups where they can provide constructive feedback to each other. This promotes active engagement, allows students to learn from each other, and enhances their speaking skills through collaboration and interaction.

6. Authentic Language Exposure: Maximize authentic language exposure by incorporating real-life materials such as videos, audio recordings, podcasts, and authentic texts. Expose students to different accents, registers, and styles of spoken language to improve their listening comprehension and speaking skills. Encourage students to explore authentic resources outside the classroom as well.
7. Formative Assessment and Feedback: Implement formative assessment strategies that specifically focus on speaking skills. Provide regular feedback to students on their speaking performance, highlighting areas of improvement and offering guidance for further development. Use rubrics or checklists to assess and provide targeted feedback on pronunciation, fluency, vocabulary usage, and coherence in spoken language.
8. Technology Integration: Utilize technology tools and resources to enhance speaking learning. Language learning apps, online speaking platforms, and multimedia resources can provide additional speaking practice, interactive exercises, and opportunities for self-assessment. Ensure equitable access to technology resources for all students.¹⁹

These strategies aim to create a supportive and engaging learning environment where students can develop their speaking skills effectively within the Merdeka Curriculum. By implementing these strategies, educators can address the challenges students face and facilitate their progress in becoming confident and proficient speakers of the target language.

There are also several strategies for the learners to overcome problem in speaking based Merdeka curriculum implementation. According to Nation, P., & Newton, J students can applied several strategies in speaking based on the implementation new curriculum. Because Merdeka curriculum is a new curriculum and has its own characteristic, so the researcher proposed several strategies to overcome the problem;

1. Seek Speaking Opportunities: Actively seek out opportunities to practice speaking, both within and outside the classroom. This can include participating in class discussions, joining language clubs or conversation groups, or engaging in language exchange programs.
2. Engage in Self-Study: Take the initiative to engage in self-study activities to improve speaking skills. This can involve practicing speaking aloud, recording and reviewing oneself, and seeking resources such as online language tutorials or speaking exercises.
3. Utilize Technology: Make use of technology resources, such as language learning apps, online speaking platforms, or virtual language exchange programs, to enhance speaking skills and gain exposure to authentic spoken language.
4. Develop Vocabulary and Grammar: Work on improving vocabulary and grammar knowledge to enhance speaking fluency and accuracy. This can involve engaging in vocabulary-building exercises, practicing sentence construction, and seeking feedback from teachers or peers.

5. Practice Pronunciation: Focus on improving pronunciation skills by practicing sounds, intonation, and stress patterns. This can involve using pronunciation apps, listening to native speakers, or working with language learning resources specifically targeting pronunciation.
6. Seek Feedback and Guidance: Actively seek feedback and guidance from teachers, peers, or language tutors to identify areas for improvement and receive suggestions for enhancing speaking skills.
7. Embrace Mistakes: Adopt a growth mindset and view mistakes as opportunities for learning and improvement. Be willing to take risks and embrace the learning process, even if it means making errors while speaking.
8. Set Speaking Goals: Set specific and achievable goals for speaking improvement. This can help maintain motivation and provide a sense of direction in working towards enhancing speaking skills.
9. Immerse in Authentic Language Contexts: Seek opportunities to immerse oneself in authentic language contexts, such as watching movies, listening to podcasts, or engaging in conversations with native speakers. This exposure can help develop a natural feel for the language and enhance speaking abilities.
10. Practice Active Listening: Develop strong listening skills to better understand spoken language and improve speaking responses. Active listening can aid in acquiring vocabulary, understanding pronunciation, and developing conversational strategies²⁰.

²⁰ Nation, P., & Newton, J. (2009). Teaching ESL/EFL Listening and Speaking. Routledge.P.134

These strategies empower students to take ownership of their learning and actively work towards improving their speaking skills within the Merdeka curriculum.

B. Review of Previous Study

1. Review of Related Study

The first research was conducted by Siti Ratna Ayu, a student of English Education Department Tarbiyah and Lecture Training Faculty State Islamic University of Raden Intan Bandar Lampung. Under the title “An Analysis of The Students’ Problem in Learning Speaking at The First Semester of the Eleventh Grade Students of SMKN 6 Bandar Lampung in Academic Year 2018”. The research Methodology was qualitative research design, the populations were all students of eleventh grade of SMKN 6 Bandar Lampung. The sample of this research was students of XI TPHPI (Teknologi Pengolahan Hasil Perikanan) at the eleventh grade. Researcher collected the data by interviewing students as information and observing the teaching and learning process. Also, collect data by using questionnaire. Before researching, the researcher selected the informants. After selecting the informants, Researcher set time to conduct an interview. Then, the researcher analyzed the data by using data reduction. The similarities between this research and Siti's research can be found in the research subject is about learning to speak, but Siti's research is only limited to that researching the problem of speaking learning in general, this research will more complete analysis of speaking learning problems in implementing the Merdeka curriculum.

The second research was conducted by Rista Ananda Ningias. A student of Tidar University of Magelang. Under the title “EFL Students; Perspective on Their Self-efficacy in Speaking during Online Learning”.²¹ The research Methodology was a descriptive qualitative research design, the population was the first, third and fifth semester of English department students in Tidar University, Magelang. The sample of this research was 33 students who were selected by purposive sampling. Researcher collected the data by distributing questionnaire to gather the data. The similarities between this research and Rista’s research is in the subject of research about speaking, but Rista’s research was only researched the perspective, this research will more fully analyze the problems of learning to speak in the implementation of the independent curriculum.

The third research was conducted by Moya Aisyah Abduna a student of IAIN Kediri. Under the title “A Case Study of Online Speaking Anxiety in EFL Classroom”.²² The research Methodology was a qualitative case study, the population was the third semester of English department students in IAIN Kediri. The sample of this research was 17 students who were selected by purposive sampling. Researcher collected the data by distributing questionnaire to gather the data. The similarities between this research and Moya’s research is in the subject of research about speaking problem, this research will more fully analyze the problem of learning to speak during the merdeka curriculum implementation.

These studies have similarities with this research. This research complement the research above to provide a brief explanation of the problems of learning to speak in an independent curriculum. Furthermore, this research can be

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

In this chapter, the researcher explores the research method in finding some required information. It obtains with research design, research subject, research instrument, data collection, and data analysis.

A. Research Design

In this research, the descriptive qualitative research design was used to describe the problem faced by students in learning speaking in Merdeka Curriculum implementation at MAN Rejang Lebong. According to Ary et al, qualitative research design is a set of plans used to comprehend an existing or phenomenon by focusing on the total pictures rather than breaking it down into variables. The goal is holistic picture and depth of understanding, rather than numeric data analysis.²⁴

And there are several reasons why choosing qualitative methods for this research:

Delving into Individual Experiences: Qualitative methods allow researchers to delve deeper into individuals' experiences, understand their perspectives, and explore deeper contexts. In the context of this research, qualitative methods will allow researchers to understand in depth the challenges and experiences of students in learning English speaking skills under the Merdeka Curriculum.

Opportunities for In-Depth Observation: Through qualitative methods, researchers can make in-depth observations of the phenomena under study. This will allow researchers to capture small details, nuances, and context that might be missed if only using quantitative methods. In this research, direct observation of students' interactions in learning to speak English can provide valuable insights.

Understanding Local Context and Culture: Qualitative methods allow researchers to understand the local context and culture that influence students' experiences of learning. This is important because the Merdeka Curriculum is applied in the unique Indonesian educational context. Researchers can explore how cultural, social and environmental factors influence learning to speak English at MAN Rejang Lebong.

Flexibility in Data Collection: Qualitative methods offer flexibility in data collection, such as in-depth interviews, observations, and document analysis. This allows researchers to collect data from multiple sources and gain a more holistic understanding of the phenomenon under study. In this research, researchers can use a combination of various data collection techniques to get a comprehensive picture of the problem of learning to speak English at MAN Rejang Lebong.

Enables Contextual and Descriptive Research: Qualitative methods allow researchers to explore phenomena in a more contextual and descriptive way. This allows researchers to understand the dynamics that occur in the field and analyze various aspects that may be complex and multidimensional. In this research, the descriptive approach obtained through qualitative methods will provide a deeper understanding of the problem of learning to speak English at MAN Rejang Lebong. By considering the reasons above, qualitative methods can be the right choice to explore students' challenges and experiences in learning English speaking skills under the Merdeka Curriculum at MAN Rejang Lebong.

B. Subject of The Research

The subject of this study was seven students of tenth class at MAN Rejang Lebong which are consist of four males and three females. The researcher choose them as the subject of this research because based on the previous interview with teacher, it is known those students have some problems in learning speaking especially English in Merdeka Curriculum because in this curriculum force students to be active and need high self-regulation. Based the speaking score during teaching proses or test they also have low score achievement in speaking. Based on the interview directly to the students; they said that they have problem in mastering speaking in Merdeka Curriculum because of lack information about it. The researcher used Purposive sampling to select the subject of the research based on the criteria that mention before. According to Creswell, Purposive sampling is selecting individuals or cases that possess certain characteristics or qualities important to the research purpose, based on the researcher's judgment.

C. Technique of Collecting Data

The Technique used to collect the data were observation and Interview. The observation used to know the answer of the first research problem. Meanwhile, the Interview used to investigate the strategy used by learner to overcome problem in speaking in Merdeka Curriculum.

1. Observation

Observation is a kind of data collection through observing something and writing about phenomenon being observed. According to Ary stated that observation is the basic for collecting the data in qualitative research and it is more than “hanging out”. Therefore, the result of qualitative observation refers to complete description of the setting to understand the complex interactions happened in the classroom. In other explanation, Ary divided observation into participant observation and non-participant observation. In participant observation, the observer actively participates and becomes as insider in the event being observed. In contrast, in non-participant observation, the observer is not directly involved in the situation to observe. In other word, the observer does not affect the object or subject of observation²⁵ In this research, the researcher conducts a non-participant observation because she observed without participating or taking any active part in the class. The field notes used as instruments to gain data's which emphasized the information related to speaking problems faced by tenth grade student. The field notes was applied to identify the detail information about speaking problem.

²⁵Ary (2010:431). Qualitative Research Methods: A Data Collector's Field Guide. New York: Asaid.

According by Lexy J. Moleong define that interview with specific conversational objectives. In this method researchers and respondents directly (face to face) to obtain information verbally by obtaining objective data that can explain the research problem.²⁶ Technique of interview was conducted face to face through question and answer between the researcher or data collector and the respondent or informant or data source. The data collection technique in the form of interviews carried out by way of question and answer between researchers and respondents in order to obtain information or subjective perceptions from informants regarding the topic to be studied. The previous researcher had to prepare interview questions in advance.

D. Research Instruments

There are two instruments used in this research. The first is observation checklist to confirm the answer from interview section.

1. Observation Checklist

Observation checklist here used to confirm the result of interview from students problem in speaking and strategy to solve the problem in Merdeka Curriculum implementation at MAN Rejang Lebong. The researcher used the observation checklist to check weather the answer of interview is the same with what happened in the field. The researcher make the observation checklist based on the theory from Nation, P., & Newton, J. Teaching ESL/EFL Listening and Speaking. Routledge elaborated with Merdeka Curriculum Guided Book. The blueprint of observation checklist can be seen in the table below;

E. Data Analysis Technique

The researcher used Miles and Huberman in terms of analysis the data. the following steps to analyse the data, such as:²⁷

1. Managing

²⁷ Miles, M.B. & Huberman, A.M. (1994). Qualitative data analysis. London: Sage Production Inc.

Before the data from interview was ready and able to be interpreted, they were managed by envisioning what the data from interview of the research look like. The researcher divides the data based on the resources. From interview data was saved in folders. Besides that, the folders of data were divided also by the date are gotten.

2. Reading/Memoing

After managing the data, the researcher read the data from interview by using the result of interview. The researcher read what the problem faced by students in speaking in Merdeka curriculum Problem in Teaching at MAN Rejang Lebong

3. Classifying

Classifying data is done after reading the data interview. The data were classified based on the interview and observation about the problem faced by students in speaking in Merdeka curriculum Problem in Teaching at MAN Rejang Lebong

4. Description

Description is based on the interview and interview guidance. In this step, the researcher starts to describe all the data that can help the researcher to do next step in analyzing the data.

5. Interpreting

Data interpretation continuous after the data collection, analysis and interpretative stage of a study, interpretation is also a part of process of writing the result of study. Interpretation is the reflective, integrative, and explanatory aspects of dealing with studies data. Data interpretation is based heavily on the connections, common aspects, and linkages among the data, especially the identified categories and patterns. The researcher is interpreting data whenever he/she uses some conceptual basic or understanding to cluster a variety of data pieces into a category. To aid interpretation, it is important to make explicit what the conceptual basis or understandings of the categories are, and what makes one category different from other.

F. Triangulation

In qualitative research, findings or data can be stated valid if there is no difference between what the researcher reported with what the reality happen on object. But, it needs to know that the truth of reality data according qualitative research is not singular, but is plural and it depends on human construction that is formed in a person as a mentality process of individual with the variety of background. According Creswell, triangulation is a validity check of data that utilizes other in out of data for checking a purpose or as comparing with the data, the technique uses check in other source²⁸. To make the data valid, the writer uses triangulation of data source and technique of collecting data. The data sources if the study is documents of video script Buyer-Seller Transaction and interview. The purpose of interview informant is to make the data and also to consult this title and the data source that have been founded to be relevant. The technique of collecting data from document is content analysis, while from informant, the writer uses interview and informant. The researcher also used professional judgement to check weather the blueprint of each instrument are valid.

The aim of this study was to investigate deeply at “the problem faced by students in learning speaking in Merdeka Curriculum and strategies used by the students to overcome the problem in Merdeka Curriculum implementation at MAN Rejang Lebong”. The researcher conducted an observation checklist for observations and interview guidelines for interview questions for gaining the data. The research findings and discussion are involved in this section.

From the table above, it was clear that there are some problem faced by students in learning speaking based on the implementation of Merdeka Curriculum at tenth grade of MAN Rejang Lebong. The explanation can be seen below:

1) Limited Speaking Opportunities

The researcher confirmed that the students struggle to improve their oral communication skills in learning process because of time allocation. It also gives big impact to students to speak English practice during class sessions. Lack of structured speaking tasks or assignments that require students to express their thoughts, opinions, or ideas orally was also becoming a problem for students to speak.

2) Insufficient Vocabulary and Grammar Knowledge

During the observation, the researcher found that limited range of vocabulary used by students can cause resulting in repetitive or simplistic language usage. This can give big impact to students as a learner to learn speaking. The indicator of this problem also appeared in students who are struggles in comprehending or producing longer and more complex texts due to limited language resources.

3) Pronunciation and Intonation Difficulties

Another problem found by the teacher was Limited range of vocabulary used by students. It can trigger students to do repetitive or simplistic language usage. The students also struggle in comprehending or producing longer and more complex texts due to limited language resources in teaching process.

4) Limited Speaking Confidence

In Merdeka Curriculum, students work in three steps; Pairs, Group and Individual work. These phases make some students may feel hesitant or self-conscious when speaking in front of their peers or participating in oral activities. Three phases before also make students reluctance to actively participate in speaking tasks or discussions.

5) Lack of Speaking Assessment and Feedback

In Merdeka Curriculum, Assessment is crucial think in learning process. But somehow, the teacher cannot formulate the appropriate assessment to students to evaluate themselves when they learn in terms of individual work. As we know that, Merdeka Curriculum force students to learn more independently as they want. Here, students may find it challenging to identify their strengths and weaknesses in speaking. Limited or infrequent opportunities for students to showcase their speaking abilities.

6) Technological Challenges

Hinder students' engagement in online speaking activities or language-learning platforms that utilize technology for speaking practice. Lack of familiarity or proficiency in using technology tools or software for speaking practice.

7) Limited Exposure to Authentic Spoken Language

The researcher did not see the problem in this phase during the teaching learning process. There are no indicators connected to the problem that is shown in the teaching process.

b. Interview Result of strategy to overcome problem in Learning Speaking

In answering the strategy used by the students to overcome problem in teaching speaking based on the implementation of Merdeka Curriculum, the researcher used the same table (table 4.1) because when the researcher ask students about the problem, the researcher also ask the students about strategy to overcome the problem. During interview, there are several strategy used by the students in anticipating problem in learning speaking based on the implementation of Merdeka Curriculum in MAN Rejang Lebong. The explanation can be confirmed below;

1. Seek Speaking Opportunities

From the interview done by the researcher, it can be conclude that some students actively engages in class discussions, asks questions, and offers opinions or contributions during speaking activities or group work in teaching learning process in class. That is how the students overcome the problem that occurred in learning speaking. Some students also following English club to add more activities in speaking but not all students following the club.

2. Engage in Self-Study

Some student establishes specific goals for improving their speaking skills and creates a plan for achieving those goals through self-study. The researcher saw students set their own goal in studying individually.

3. Utilize Technology

The student actively engages with language learning applications or mobile apps that offer speaking exercises, interactive dialogues, or pronunciation practice. The students overcome the problem through their mobile phone.

4. Develop Vocabulary and Grammar

The student did not actively seeks opportunities to learn new words, phrases, and expressions related to the target language. This can include using vocabulary-building exercises, flashcards, or online resources to expand their vocabulary. It means that the students skipped this strategy.

5. Practice Pronunciation

The researcher found in interview section that the student actively participates in pronunciation exercises, such as tongue twisters, minimal pair activities, or pronunciation drills, to improve their articulation and phonetic accuracy as the solution in anticipating problem in learning speaking based on Merdeka Curriculum.

6. Seek Feedback and Guidance

From the interview to the students, the researcher did not see that the students seek feedback and guidance as a solution to the problem in learning speaking based on Merdeka Curriculum.

7. Embrace Mistakes

In the field of research, the researcher cannot find that the student is willing to take risks and step out of their comfort zone when speaking, even if it means making mistakes.

8. Immerse in Authentic Language Contexts

The student actively did not seek opportunities to interact with native speakers of the target language, engaging in conversations, language exchange programs, or cultural events because they still have lack opportunities in using media.

9. Set Speaking Goals

The student can clearly articulate their desired outcomes and specific areas of improvement for their speaking skills. The researcher saw that the students did not use this strategy as a means to overcome problem in speaking based on Merdeka Curriculum implementation in speaking class.

10. Practice Active Listening

The student actively concentrates and maintains attention during listening activities, minimizing distractions and actively engaging with the audio or speaker. Many students used this strategy based on the observation conducted by the researcher in observation 1, 2 and 3. They listen song, watch video and etc.

B. DISCUSSION

In this section the researcher discusses about “Students Problem in Learning Speaking Skills in Merdeka Curriculum Implementation at Tenth Grade of MAN rejang Lebong”. Here, some points that the researcher gained from the interview and observation;

1. Students Problem in Learning Speaking Skills in Merdeka Curriculum Implementation at Tenth Grade of MAN Rejang Lebong.

Based on the interview and observation conducted by the researcher, it can be shown that there are several problem faced by the students in learning speaking based on Merdeka Curriculum implementation in speaking class. The problems are:

a. Limited Speaking Opportunities

The researcher confirmed that the students struggle to improve their oral communication skills in learning process because of time allocation. It also gives big impact to students to speak English practice during class sessions.

Lack of structured speaking tasks or assignments that require students to express their thoughts, opinions, or ideas orally was also becoming a problem for students to speak. According to Kuncoro H in his journal talking about speaking in Merdeka Curriculum, stated that the problem that the student-centered approach of the Merdeka Curriculum may result in limited opportunities for students to engage in meaningful speaking activities. Without sufficient speaking practice, students may struggle to improve their oral communication skills. It was confirmed by the teacher during the research.

The researcher found that limited range of vocabulary used by students can cause resulting in repetitive or simplistic language usage. This can give big impact to students as a learner to learn speaking. The indicator of this problem also appeared in students who are struggles in comprehending or producing longer and more complex texts due to limited language resources.

In line with Hana Handayani in her Research who stated that some students in the Merdeka Curriculum may face challenges in acquiring an adequate range of vocabulary and understanding grammar rules. This can impede their ability to express themselves accurately and fluently in spoken language

Another problem found by the teacher was Limited range of vocabulary used by students. It can trigger students to do repetitive or simplistic language usage. The students also struggle in comprehending or producing longer and more complex texts due to limited language resources in teaching process.

According to Brown, Achieving correct pronunciation and intonation is crucial for effective communication.²⁹ However, students may encounter difficulties in acquiring the sounds and intonation patterns of the target language. Without proper guidance and practice, they may struggle to pronounce words accurately and convey meaning effectively. It was confirmed also during the research.

d. Limited Speaking Confidence

In Merdeka Curriculum, students work in three steps; Pairs, Group and Individual work. These phases make some students may feel hesitant or self-conscious when speaking in front of their peers or participating in oral activities. Three phases before also make students' reluctance to actively participate in speaking tasks or discussions. Furthermore, Jana Tan confirmed that in the Merdeka Curriculum may inadvertently lead to a lack of speaking confidence among students. Some students may feel hesitant or self-conscious when speaking in front of their peers or participating in oral activities. Overcoming this lack of confidence is essential for the development of speaking skills.

In Merdeka Curriculum, Assessment is crucial think in learning process. But somehow, the teacher cannot formulate the appropriate assessment to students to evaluate themselves when they learn in terms of individual work. As we know that, Merdeka Curriculum force students to learn more independently as they want. Here, students may find it challenging to identify their strengths and weaknesses in speaking. Limited or infrequent opportunities for students to showcase their speaking abilities. This finding was the same with Nero H theory who stated that the Merdeka Curriculum may not provide adequate feedback and evaluation specifically focused on speaking skills. Without targeted assessment and constructive feedback, students may find it challenging to identify their strengths and weaknesses in speaking. This can hinder their progress in improving their oral communication abilities

f. Technological Challenges

Hinder students' engagement in online speaking activities or language-learning platforms that utilize technology for speaking practice. Lack of familiarity or proficiency in using technology tools or software for speaking practice. This problem also confirmed by Recall Theory who stated that The integration of technology in the Merdeka Curriculum can present both opportunities and challenges for students in speaking learning. Technical issues or limited access to technology resources may hinder students' engagement in online speaking activities or language-learning platforms that utilize technology for speaking practice

From the data above, it was clear that there 6 problems occurred during interview and confirmed by the observation. According to Brown there at least 11 problems problem in learning speaking based on curriculum changes. Here, the researcher found there are 6 problem occurred during learning process.³⁰

2. Strategy to Solve Problem in Learning Speaking Skills in Merdeka Curriculum Implementation at Tenth Grade of MAN Rejang Lebong.

³⁰ Brown, H. Douglas. 2001. Teaching by Principles. An Interactive Approach to Language Pedagogy. Englewood Cliffs: Prentice Hall.

Based on the findings before, it was confirmed that there are several strategy used by the students to solve problem inlearning speaking skills in Merdeka Curriculum implementation at Tenth grade of MAN Rejang Lebong. There are interview section then after that confirmed the result of interview with observation during the research. The strategies are;

a. Seek Speaking Opportunities

From the findings explained by the researcher, it can be conclude that some students actively engages in class discussions, asks questions, and offers opinions or contributions during speaking activities or group work in teaching learning process in class. That is how the students overcome the problem that occurred in learning speaking. Some students also following English club to add more activities in speaking but not all students following the club. In line with Nunan who stated that provide ample opportunities for students to engage in meaningful speaking activities. This can include pair work, group discussions, presentations, role-plays, debates, and simulations. Encourage active participation and create a supportive and inclusive learning environment where students feel comfortable expressing themselves orally

b. Engage in Self-Study

Some student establishes specific goals for improving their speaking skills and creates a plan for achieving those goals through self-study. The researcher saw students set their own goal in studying individually. In line with Maryama in her research who stated that take the initiative to engage in self-study activities to improve speaking skills. This can involve practicing speaking aloud, recording and reviewing oneself, and seeking resources such as online language tutorials or speaking exercises

c. Utilize Technology

The student actively engages with language learning applications or mobile apps that offer speaking exercises, interactive dialogues, or pronunciation practice. The students overcome the problem through their mobile phone. This also confirmed by Nunan in chapter 2 who stated that Make use of technology resources, such as language learning apps, online speaking platforms, or virtual language exchange programs, to enhance speaking skills and gain exposure to authentic spoken language

d. Develop Vocabulary and Grammar

The student did not actively seek opportunities to learn new words, phrases, and expressions related to the target language. This can include using vocabulary-building exercises, flashcards, or online resources to expand their vocabulary. It means that the students skipped this strategy. Brown H stated that work on improving vocabulary and grammar knowledge to enhance speaking fluency and accuracy. This can involve engaging in vocabulary-building exercises, practicing sentence construction, and seeking feedback from teachers or peers.

e. Practice Pronunciation

The researcher found in observation 1, 2 and 3 that the student actively participates in pronunciation exercises, such as tongue twisters, minimal pair activities, or pronunciation drills, to improve their articulation and phonetic accuracy as the solution in anticipating problem in learning speaking based on Merdeka Curriculum. The same way with Hexa in her journal who stated that Focus on improving pronunciation skills by practicing sounds, intonation, and stress patterns. This can involve using pronunciation apps, listening to native speakers, or working with language learning resources specifically targeting pronunciation.

f. Practice Active Listening

The student actively concentrates and maintains attention during listening activities, minimizing distractions and actively engaging with the audio or speaker. They listen song, watch video and etc. Develop strong listening skills to better understand spoken language and improve speaking responses. Active listening can aid in acquiring vocabulary, understanding pronunciation, and developing conversational strategies according to Nunan.³¹

There are 8 strategies can be used to overcome problem faced by Speaking Leaner proposed by Nunan, D. The researcher connect the theory to the implementation of Merdeka Curriculum by guided book from Ministry of Education. In the research field, there are only 6 strategies used by the students to solve the problem in learning speaking based on Merdeka Curriculum implementation.

3. The students

Students have to understand that there are some challenging side in learning speaking based on the implementation of new curriculum, they must be ready with all the changes.

4. The others researcher.

There are still many side that undone by the researcher so hope that the next researcher can dig more information from the implementation of Merdeka curriculum in teaching speaking.
